

Title:

Estimating Mean Dimensionality

Author(s):

Ruixue Liu and Art B. Owen

Technical Report number (Dept. of Statistics, Stanford Univ.):

2003-14

Date:

June 2003

Abstract:

The mean dimension of a function is defined as a certain weighted combination of its ANOVA mean squares. This paper presents some new identities relating this mean dimension, and some similarly defined higher moments, to the variable importance measures of Sobol' (1993). The methods are applied to study some functions arising in the bootstrap, in computational finance, and in extreme value theory.